Tour notes: Dandenong Market history

The traditional owners of the area of Dandenong are the Indigenous people of the Woiwurrung tribe.

When the Europeans first came to settle in the area in 1840, they needed a meeting point to trade cattle and buy fresh food.

In the 1850, two acres of land was set aside for a cattle yard and farmers market.

Dandenong Market was officially opened in 1866. The market sold beef and dairy cattle, chickens, horses, as well as fruit, vegetables, eggs and household items.

Dandenong was an important area for people travelling from Gippsland to Melbourne and became known as the "Gateway to Gippsland".

In 1926, the Market located to its existing site on the Corner of Clow and Cleeland streets.

In 1956, the livestock section of the market moved to another site in Dandenong.

A local icon at the Dandenong Market is the Dandy Pig. The Dandy Pig is a neon sign that first appeared in the 1950s. The finely dressed pig tips his top hat to welcome people to Dandenong.

When the market first opened, it only traded on Tuesdays. In 1976, the Market started to trade on a Friday. In 1982, the Market started to trade every Saturday and in 2013, the Market started trading on a Sunday.

In 1996 the Market was renovated with a new fruit and vegetable area and a large carpark added. In 2009, The Bazaar was built, with the Pantry added in 2010 and Meat, Fish and Deli hall added in 2011.
